
Schriftliche Abiturprüfung Leistungskursfach Englisch - E R S T T E R M I N -

Material für den Prüfungsteilnehmer

Allgemeine Arbeitshinweise

Ihre Arbeitszeit (einschließlich der Zeit für Lesen und evtl. Auswählen von Aufgaben) beträgt 270 Minuten.

Die Prüfungsarbeit besteht aus den zu bearbeitenden Teilen A und B.

Zeitliche Orientierung und organisatorischer Ablauf:

Teil A	Text
A 1	Text production	ca. 180 min
	A 1.1 Comprehension / Analysis / Interpretation
	A 1.2 Comment
A 2	Language	ca. 30 min
Teil B	Translation	ca. 60 min

1. Die Reihenfolge für die Bearbeitung der Aufgaben ist freigestellt. Bei der Textproduktion dürfen nicht mehr als vier aufeinander folgende Wörter unverändert aus der Vorlage übernommen werden. Treffende Zitate sind als solche zu kennzeichnen.
2. Zählen Sie die Wörter der beiden Teilbereiche von A 1. Der Gesamtumfang der Textproduktion soll mindestens 500 Wörter betragen.
3. Bei der Übersetzung ist zu beachten: Zusätzliche, z. B. in Klammern angegebene Übersetzungsvarianten gehen nicht in die Wertung ein.
4. Die einzelnen Aufgabenteile sind deutlich sichtbar zu kennzeichnen und voneinander zu trennen.

Erlaubte Hilfsmittel:

- Einsprachiges Wörterbuch Englisch
- Wörterbuch der deutschen Rechtschreibung

Prüfungsinhalt

Teil A: Text

Troubled Teens

- 1 Essayist Anne Taylor Fleming considers America's troubled adolescents.

For some years now, we've been reading about the problems of adolescent girls. First, there was Carol Gilligan with her pioneering work; then, a few years
5 back, the big best-seller, "Reviving Ophelia". The gist of their research was the same: Little girls are feisty and full of beans and hope in equal measure, but that confidence and sass gets knocked out of them when puberty comes, and the culture at large begins to send big-time messages to them about being female, feminine, appealing. They lose their way, their voice. They go underground, start wearing feminine camouflage: Tight pants and crop tops, lip gloss
10 and hair gel. They go from subject to object, daredevils to dieters.

I just figured that in the last couple of years, things had gotten a lot better, what with all the moms I know doing their dead-level best to counteract all those cultural messages and raise strong, vibrant daughters. Not just mothers –
15 fathers, too, have been in the trenches, encouraging their daughters on the soccer field and in the science lab. But a casual look at the teen magazines for girls gives grievous pause to one's optimism. They are ever more chock full of beauty and sex tips. These are just some of the how-to manuals for little Lollitas. From "Cosmo Girl" to "Sugar" to "Jump", there are date guides and kissing
20 instructions and dieting tips, not to mention all the ads full of rail-thin modellettes in skimpy clothes and come-on poses. What's a 12- or 13-year old to make of all this? Of herself – the complicatedly burgeoning body?

And just when you start asking those questions, along comes another cry of concern from a different phalanx of authors and researchers, this time about 25 boys, and the analogies are quite startling. Obviously, the signs have been there, at Littleton and West Paducah and Jonesboro, America's sons – some of them, anyway – turned into homicidal adolescents. These are only the most damaged and damaging poster boys for the crisis. There's a whole sea of hurting and lost boys underneath them, suffering from much of what girls are suffering from: Low self-esteem, loneliness, an obsession with the way they look. If 30 girls are looking at rail-thin models and rock stars, boys are measuring themselves against the pretty boy movie stars and muscle-bound sports icons of the society, including the jocks on their very own campuses, who often deride them as oversensitive wimps.

Read the bios of the killer kids, of Harris and Klebold, of Kip Kinkel and Luke 35 Woodham, and you'll read the same thing: Teased by jocks; called "faggot"; called pudgy and gay; teased for being fat. It's all there: The sexual putdowns, the "you're not good enoughs", all coming at that moment when boys are struggling to be men in a culture that fawns over the suave and muscled, leaving the 40 awkward loners with their angst and anger and acne to withdraw into cyberspace, where they can practice video revenge that sometimes explodes into an actual schoolyard killing spree. In short, boys are now being as commodified as girls. They're being tyrannized by images of masculine perfection, just as girls are being tyrannized by images of feminine perfection, at a time when so many

45 parents are working so many hours, they can't be there.

Obviously, some kids – perhaps a lot, girls and boys – are doing great, defining themselves with moxie and individuality. But a lot of others are struggling, and all the rest of us can do – parents, mentors, whatever, whoever – is listen hard and care hard, and do our best to shepherd them safely through the commercialized minefield that is now American adolescence, circa 2000.

50 I' am Anne Taylor Fleming.

June 20, 2000

(651 words)

From:

pbs newshour

http://www.pbs.org/newshour/essays/june00/fleming_6-20.html

[download/12 Jan 2004]

Annotations:

line 26: Littleton,
West Paducah, Jonesboro

- American towns where school shootings took place

line 47: moxie

- (informal AE) courage, energy, determination

A 1 Text production

A 1.1 COMPREHENSION / ANALYSIS / INTERPRETATION

Answer in complete English sentences.

- 1.1.1 Summarise the key points made in the text about the situation of teenage girls and teenage boys. Include reasons and consequences. 6 BE
- 1.1.2 Outline the role adults play in this respect. 3 BE
- 1.1.3 Analyse the author's use of language and show what this means for the purpose of this text. 4 BE
- 1.1.4 Interpret the statement.
"They go from subject to object, ..." (line 11) 2 BE

Inhalt: 15 BE

A 1.2 COMMENT

Choose one of the following topics.

- 1.2.1 Portray a person, historical or contemporary, who could serve as a role model or icon for young people. Give reasons for your choice.

- 1.2.2 Robert, Who Is Often a Stranger to Himself

Do you ever look in the looking-glass
And see a stranger there?
A child you know and do not know,
Wearing what you wear?

Gwendolyn Brooks

Interpret the poem.

- 1.2.3 Write an anonymous letter to the editor responding to Ms Fleming's argumentation.

Inhalt: 10 BE

Erreichbare BE-Anzahl (Summe A 1.1 und A 1.2)

Inhaltliche Leistung:	25 BE
Sprachrichtigkeit:	20 BE
Ausdrucksvermögen:	10 BE
	55 BE

A 2 Language

A 2.1 VOCABULARY

- 2.1.1 Explain the following phrases. Keep to the context.
- a) "... have been in the trenches, ..." (line 15) 1 BE
 - b) "... rail-thin modelettes ..." (line 20) 1 BE
 - c) "... come-on poses." (line 21) 1 BE
 - d) "... commercialized minefield ..." (lines 49/50) 1 BE
- 2.1.2 Substitute the underlined expression.
- "... doing their dead-level best ..."
- (line 13) 1 BE
- 2.1.3 Change the style of the underlined phrases
- a) into more formal style.
- "... confidence and sass gets knocked out of them ..."
- (line 7) 1 BE
- b) into less formal style.
- "... gives grievous pause to one's optimism."
- (line 17) 1 BE

A 2.2 GRAMMAR

- 2.2.1 Rewrite the sentence without changing its meaning.
- "For some years now, we've been reading about the problems of adolescent girls."
- Begin: Some years ago we ...
- (lines 3/4) 1 BE
- 2.2.2 Insert a suitable adverb in its proper position.
- "They lose their way, their voice."
- (line 9) 1 BE
- 2.2.3 Rewrite the participles as complete clauses.
- a) "Teased by jocks; ..."
- (line 36) 1 BE
- b) "The sexual putdowns, the 'you're not good enoughs', all coming at that moment ..."
- (lines 37/38) 1 BE
- 2.2.4 Transform into the active.
- "They are being tyrannized by images of masculine perfection ..."
- (line 43) 1 BE
- 2.2.5 Formulate a question to get the underlined part of the sentence as the answer.
- "... just as girls are being tyrannized by images of feminine perfection ..."
- (lines 43/44) 1 BE
- 2.2.6 Transform into a complete relative clause in the passive.
- "..., and all the rest of us can do – ..."
- (line 48) 1 BE
- 2.2.7 Complete the following sentence in accordance with the context.
- If ..., fewer girls would worry about their weight.
- 1 BE

Erreichbar: 15 BE

Teil B: Translation

BBC Film Review

1 [...] "Bowling for Columbine" is a documentary that works as a hugely entertaining movie, as well as a double-barreled blast at American gun culture and the media.

5 It starts with tubby, bear-faced American satirist Michael Moore opening a bank account and receiving a rifle as a free gift. Unbelievable, but not the only shocking element in this powerful exploration of violence in the USA.

Moore's inquiries into why America is such a violent society are sparked by the Columbine massacre – the 1999 high school shooting in which 13 people were killed by two malcontent teens who then took their own lives.

10 At first, it seems his answer will be obvious: readily available guns. But what appears to be a simplistic anti-gun polemic broadens in scope, to tar the media, racism, greed and US foreign policy.

(138 words)

From:

BBC

http://www.bbc.co.uk/films/2002/10/28/bowling_for_columbine_2002_review.shtml
[download/12 Jan 2004]

Erreichbar: 20 BE